DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 3, 5, 8-10, 13-16, 18-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Collins et al. [6,018,125].

Collins et al. disclose an electronic component [figure 2] mounted within a chassis [10] including a polymer electromagnetic interference (EMI) shield [14] comprising: a waveguide body including an array of circular waveguide cells [18] each having a contiguous inner surface; and an absorber layer [column 2, lines 60-61] covering at least a portion of each contiguous inner surfaces and capable of absorbing electromagnetic radiation over a select frequency range.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 2 and 12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Collins et al. in view of Mitchell [6,426,459].

Collins et al. disclose the instant claimed invention except for: each waveguide cells having a polygonal crosssection, and the shield being formed of a metallic material.

Mitchell discloses a waveguide shield [10] formed of metal having polygonal shape cells.

It would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time invention was made to use the shield design of Mitchell for the shield design of Collins et al. for the purpose of improving ventilation.

Claims 4, 6, 7, 17 and 25-26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Collins et al.

Collins et al. disclose the instant claimed invention except for: the polygonal cross-sectional shape being rectangular, the specific absorber layer thickness and the specific resistivity of the absorber layer.

The specific shape of the waveguide, absorber layer thickness and resistivity would have been obvious design consideration based on the specific application intended for the device.

Regarding claims 25-26, to use screws to attach the shielding to the chassis would have been obvious in order to securely mounted the shield thereto.

Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Collins et al. in view of Narang et al. [5,976,666].

Collins et al. disclose the instant claimed invention except for: the absorber layer including an epoxy resin filled with particles having a high magnetic loss over the select frequency range.

Narang et al. disclose an absorber layer for an EMI shield including an epoxy resin filled with particles having a high magnetic loss over the select frequency range [abstract].

It would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time invention was made to use magnetic particles in the absorber layer of Collins et al. for the purpose of controlling frequencies.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Urein et al. [6,324,075] ; Clements et al. [5,928,076] ; Hailey et al. [6,252,161] ; Cherniski et al. [6,297,446].
